ABSTRACT

[0060]   A client submits a subscription to a database specifying selected data within a data set. A subscription plan is generated based on the subscription. A query is submitted to the database changing selected data within the data set. A query plan is generated based on the query. The subscription is matched to the query based on the data set, and the query plan is supplemented with the subscription plan to generate a notification of the change to the client.